

NEW PARTNERSHIP

The practice itself dates back to the 20th century. Bob Pigott, took the practice on in 1960. Ulli Arnold became his partner in 1987. Since Bob's retirement in 1995, Ulli has been in sole charge/ownership and has become the very heart of the practice. The practice has grown considerably over the past years. Looking after a busy country practice has been a struggle for a sole director. Over the years Ulli has been looking for the perfect partner who has a similar approach to vetting. His partner would need to be someone who he could hand the reins over to once he reaches retirement. We sadly see so many independent vet practices sell to larger corporate companies nowadays and lose their identity. This is something that Ulli has fought against and, by going into partnership with a like-minded individual, will hopefully prevent from happening in the foreseeable future thereby retaining Moorgate's identity.

Ashley Rubens, who most of you must now surely know, joined us following his graduation from The Royal Veterinary College, London in 2006. From late 2009 to the end of 2013 Ashley worked as a locum across the country from large hospitals to farm specialists to broaden his experience. Ashley rejoined us in January 2014 and has settled back into Moorgate life well, becoming a familiar face on farms and in practice.

From 1st December 2016 we are pleased to announce that Ashley and Ulli will be officially working alongside each other as partners. The practice itself will be run in the same fashion as before, as has been will always be! Not losing the close connection between all staff at Moorgate and our clientele is a driving force that keeps us all motivated for a brighter future. May we take this opportunity in wishing you one and all a very happy festive season and may the New Year bring you much good luck.
